Labor Warranty

WITH IT OR NOT?

When you get a new HVAC unit installed, you are given the option to add an extended labor warranty to your product. Having an extended labor warranty on your HVAC system can be extremely beneficial in the long run. Here are a few reasons why you should consider having an HVAC extended labor warranty.

01 Free Parts

Some wear and tear is to be expected with furnaces and air conditioners. But what if a critical component falters or fails before its time? You are covered by the manufacturer's warranty. They will send an authorized technician to your home—usually, the same company that installed the system—and pay only for the project's parts.

02 Free or Reduced Labor

Labor, travel time, and other fees are not covered by manufacturer warranties. Keep in mind that warranties frequently have two or more terms, such as five and ten years. Labor and parts may be covered entirely during the first year, but labor is not covered during the second and subsequent periods.

03 Home Value

HVAC equipment warranties are transferable. That is, if you sell your home, the warranties for your air conditioner and furnace are transferred to the new owner as long as a transfer is initiated. If the protection is effective, it adds real value to the home.

04 Peace of Mind

Having reassurance that your HVAC system is protected in case of an emergency can give you confidence. An HVAC extended labor warranty can ultimately save you from lots of stress and headaches in the future, which can also save you money.
